

Facts About Autism:

- Autism affects how the brain works.
- Certain things can be hard for people with autism, like talking, following directions, and dealing with schedule changes.
- Many people with autism also have unique strengths, like being great at certain subjects in school or being able to memorize things easily.
- Autism can affect people in lots of different ways—no two people are exactly alike!
- 1 in every 68 kids has autism. It is more common in boys than girls.
- Some people with autism are extra sensitive to lights, noises, and things or people touching them.
- People with autism can still learn new things, make friends, and have fun. Sometimes they may need extra help from teachers or classmates.

Facts About Autism:

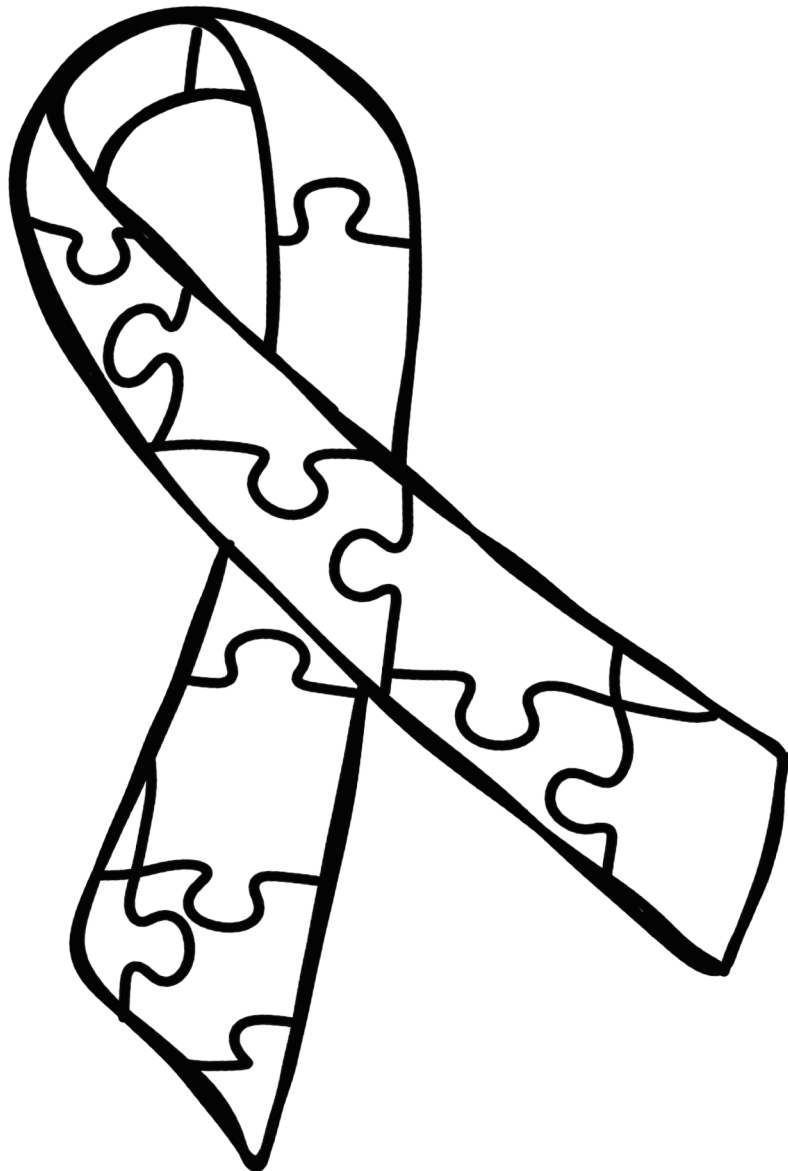

- Autism affects how the brain works.
- Certain things can be hard for people with autism, like talking, following directions, and dealing with schedule changes.
- Many people with autism also have unique strengths, like being great at certain subjects in school or being able to memorize things easily.
- Autism can affect people in lots of different ways—no two people are exactly alike!
- 1 in every 68 kids has autism. It is more common in boys than girls.
- Some people with autism are extra sensitive to lights, noises, and things or people touching them.
- People with autism can still learn new things, make friends, and have fun. Sometimes they may need extra help from teachers or classmates.

Autism [♥]
AWARENESS

Be Kind

Respect Differences

Be a Good Friend

